Everyone knows that the best universities enroll students with the highest test scores and the best grades. You also know that some places simply impress more than others. But, given that there are a few places you can study in and they offer the same majors, how do you figure out which one is right for you? Well, there are some important things to consider when deciding where to apply.

1. _____

Universities and colleges come in different sizes, from ones that enroll about 100 students to those with 20,000 each year. Which one is better? It depends on what you're comfortable with. Did you grow up in a city or in a village? Did you like the size of your high school? Give it a thought!

2. _____

The issue of the distance from your nearest and dearest is another thing to consider. How likely are you to get homesick after you leave? How much time and money can you afford to spend traveling back and forth on all family occasions? The farther you are, the less often you'll be able to visit. Will telephones be enough?

3. _____

Money is the thing your oldies think about when the topic of choosing a university comes up. Check in advance what means of help the schools offer. What income qualifies you to receive support? Are you willing to study hard so your grades can earn you a nice sum in return? Finally, is there a possibility to pick a part-time job?

4. _____

Have you always wanted to try living in another country? Some exchange programs can make your dream come true, for a semester or even a whole school year. Or maybe you're a good singer or a journalist? Some universities have great choirs or excellent magazines giving students a chance to be involved in something they love doing.

5. _____

At the weekend, will you be looking for noise, people and lights or trying to hide from the hordes of dorm mates storming into your room? Some schools, especially in big cities, have students from a wide range of backgrounds. That's a great chance to make new friends. Small town universities, on the contrary, do not suffer from a great number of events.

But, most of all, trust your feeling! Visit the places you're interested in. Can you imagine yourself going there? If it feels right, just do it!

- a. Do you want the school to fulfill your personal objectives as well as your academic goals?
- b. Which do you prefer: being greeted every step you take or staying anonymous in the crowd?
- c. After classes, do you prefer relaxing in peace and quiet, or socializing with all sorts?
- d. Would you like to explore a totally different area or do you want to do your laundry at home every weekend?
- e. Would you rather depend on your parents or on financial aids and scholarships?
- f. Would you rather live in your own room in a dormitory or share it with a colleague?
